

Bureau of Prisons Facilities

This section provides a brief profile of each of the 93 institutions that the Bureau operated as of September 30, 1997 (91 of those institutions housed inmates; the other 2 provided shared services to correctional complexes). A number of categories of information are provided for each currently operating facility; most are self-explanatory.

Security Level

The Bureau operates institutions of several different security levels to house a broad spectrum of offenders in an appropriate manner. Security levels are based on such features as the presence of external patrols, gun towers, security barriers, or detection devices; the type of housing within the institution; internal security features; and the staff-to-inmate ratio. Each facility is placed in one of five groups—minimum, low, medium, high, and administrative.

Minimum-Security

Minimum-security institutions, also known as Federal Prison Camps, have dormitory housing, a relatively low staff-to-inmate ratio, and no fences. These institutions are work- and program-oriented, and many are located adjacent to larger institutions or on military bases, where inmates help serve the labor needs of the larger institution or the base.

Low-Security

Low-security Federal Correctional Institutions (FCI's) have double-fenced perimeters, mostly dormitory housing, and strong work and program components. The staff-to-inmate ratio in these institutions is higher than in minimum-security facilities.

Medium-Security

Medium-security FCI's have strengthened perimeters (often double fences with electronic detection systems), cell-type housing, a wide variety of work and treatment programs, and an even higher staff-to-inmate ratio than do low-security FCI's, providing even greater internal controls.

High-Security

High-security institutions, also known as U.S. Penitentiaries (USP's), have highly secure perimeters (featuring walls or reinforced fences), multiple- and single- occupant cell housing, and close staff supervision and movement controls.

Administrative

Administrative facilities are institutions with special missions, such as the detention of noncitizen or pretrial offenders, the treatment of inmates with serious or chronic medical problems, or the containment of extremely dangerous, violent, or escape prone inmates. Administrative facilities include Metropolitan Correctional Centers (MCC's), Metropolitan Detention Centers (MDC's), Federal Detention Centers (FDC's), and Federal Medical Centers (FMC's), as well as the Medical Center for Federal Prisoners (MCFP) and the U.S. Penitentiary, Administrative-Maximum (ADX). Administrative facilities are capable of holding inmates in all security categories.

Correctional Complexes

A number of the institutions included in this section are parts of Federal Correctional Complexes. At FCC's, which the Bureau began constructing in the late 1980's, institutions with several different missions and security levels are located in close proximity to one another. With institutions grouped in this way, FCC's may increase cost-efficiency through the sharing of services, enable staff to gain experience at institutions of many security levels, and enhance emergency preparedness by having additional staff and resources close by.

Some FCC's—such as FCC Allenwood, FCC Butner, and FCC Florence—are essentially stand-alone institutions that make limited use of shared services arrangements. Others—such as FCC Beaumont and FCC Coleman—rely on shared services much more extensively; they have a centralized business office, personnel office, warehouse, and training center. They view all of their staff as employees of the complex, rather than employees of its component institutions, and staff rotate between posts at each of these facilities.

Capacity

Capacity refers to the number of inmates the institution was designed to hold.

Population

Population refers to the number of inmates the institution actually held on September 30, 1997.

Staff

Staff refers to the actual number of employees at an institution on September 30, 1997.

For more information on a particular facility, contact the facility or the Bureau of Prisons Office of Public Affairs at 202-307-3198.
